

Redmond Clay Summary

Redmond Clay is volcanic ash which was deposited in sea water. It is a fine white powder which people use for both internal and external cleansing. In 1974 we were introduced to a book entitled "Our Earth, Our Cure" which had recently been translated from French to English. In it a French homeopath, Raymond Dextreit, told of the healing benefits of clay. He said it was a 'living' substance because it would respond to the needs of organism. He made such miraculous claims that we just laughed and laughed.

The health food people were asking us if our clay would do what his French clay would do. We told them we didn't know. They wanted to try it, so we had it analyzed to make sure it wasn't going to kill anyone. We found that there was nothing harmful in it and that it was considered safe (actually inert) by FDA standards. So we began to sell it.

Over the next few months, as we encountered medical conditions that traditional medicine couldn't fix, in desperation we turned to our Redmond Clay. In every case it worked just like Mr. Dextreit said it would. Since 1975 we have used it successfully for diarrhea, constipation, heartburn, stomachache, acid indigestion, hiatal hernias, acid reflux, diverticulitis, and colitis just to name a few of the things it has helped. We have used it externally for cuts, bruises, insect bites, bee stings, boils, infections, rashes, eczema, arthritis, acne, and burns. Because it has worked so well, sometimes we now use it as our first choice for relief rather than after everything else has failed. We keep it in the kitchen cupboard, the bathroom cupboard, and the 72 hour kit. We keep it in the trunk of the car and under the seat of the truck. It has become our first aid kit.

To use simply mix it with water to make a gel about the consistency of mustard. The gel can then be used externally as a poultice or it can be diluted further and taken internally as a liquid. We have a small booklet entitled "We Eat Clay & Wear it, too" which we will send at no charge upon request.

If you would like to read up on the clay, we would suggest the following books:

Earth Cures by Raymond Dextreit
The Healing Clay by Michael Abehsera
The Clay Cure by Ran Knishinsky

If you have any specific questions or concerns, please contact Neal. His email address is nealb@redmondminerals.com

Sincerely,

Neal Bosshardt, Customer Service.

Box 219 . 6005 North 100 West . Redmond, Utah 84652.

Phone: (435) 529-7402 . Customer Service: (800) 367-7258 Fax: (435) 529-7486 .

Please Press Your BACK button on your server to return to the RealSalt Web Page!